Writing

A. The Harmful effects of Bombs

Cancer induction is the most significant long term risk of exposure to a nuclear bomb. Approximately one out of every so people exposed to radiation suffers from cancer. The detonation of atomic bombs over Hiroshima and Nagasaki in August 1945 resulted in horrific casualties. The long term effects of radiation exposure also increased cancer rates in the survivors. Nuclear weapons are fundamentally different from conventional weapons because of the vast amounts of explosive energy they can release and the kinds of effects they produce, such as high temperatures and radiations.
